"acoustic daydreams"

This is the only exclusively acoustic guitar album by Rens Newland. It was the first recording in his own studio, which was at that time called Crazy Man Studio, soon afterwards renamed Bizzy Mann Studio. At the beginning of 1996 he felt that the time was right to finally record an "acoustic" album! As a "Fusion" guitarist of course the biting and expressive tone of the electric guitar played a main role in his musical life, Over the years though, Newland has repeatedly used the acoustic guitar in studio sessions and frequently played solos and melodies at concerts. Already on the 2nd album of Scope - this group was the great start into his career as professional musician - the 12-string guitar played a very important role on the tracks The Zebra Part 1 & 2! But now he wanted to make a whole album with beautiful stories and musical pictures. Just brought his home studio to a fine level too, he decided to take the time to do a "home" recording. Here is the result: an aesthetic and relaxed selection of some of his favorite original compositions.

Tracklist:

1. Dutch Daydreams
2. Bright Stillness
